

February 16, 2010

MedShare Appoints Chris Thiessen as CTO

[Waterloo, Ontario] – MedShare announced the appointment of Chris Thiessen as the Chief Technology Officer.

Chris has worked in the IT industry for 17 years, during which he's led development efforts to create highly reliable, scalable, and available software across a variety of markets. With a deep interest and past experience with health care, Chris is committed to delivering world-class solutions to MedShare customers. Chris is involved in managing and growing the technical assets of the business and provides leadership for the development team.

Barry Billings, President of MedShare commented, "bringing Chris onboard in a senior technical role reinforces MedShare's commitment to delivering a world-class integrated electronic health records platform for the home care sector. MedShare's software allows nurses, therapists and home care workers to access client information, decision support and care documentation tools at the point of care. "Chris has a deep technical understanding of the challenges of running a distributed database application using store and forward architecture", says Billings, "his expertise and experience will guide the team as our systems grow to many thousands of users".

About MedShare

MedShare is an award-winning developer of mobile health information and communication technologies with a focus on home health care, the fastest growing segment of the sector. MedShare's suite of software is built on a patent pending platform for management of electronic health records and is available on BlackBerry and Windows tablet devices to meet the clinical and administrative needs of mobile health care workers.

For more information, visit www.medshare.com. Or contact:

Barry Billings

P – 519-624-0014 x225

barry.billings@medshare.com

The BlackBerry and MedShare related marks are the exclusive properties and trademarks of their respective owners.